Yesterday's regret; today's deadly fix.

Impulsive acts from the past return to haunt, resulting in the death of a popular photo-journalist near the cozy mountain town of Boone, NC. Detective Tucker must face his own past while investigating suspects determined to keep too many secrets. Did the victim take too many photos of one of them? Was it was the nurse, determined to win the horse show? Perhaps the retired military man with too many guns, the dental hygienist with too many lovers, the grandmother who loves too much or the sports medicine professor who drinks too much. Jemma Chase, trail-ride leader and CSI wannabe, follows clues, even though her interference may cost Tucker his job.

PRAISE FOR MAGGIE BISHOP'S APPALACHIAN ADVENTURE MYSTERIES

Bishop's best-structured and most subtly layered mystery yet. ... Knows exactly how to keep her readers guessing. She hides her clues masterfully in plain site and plays fair throughout this well-built story. —schuyler kaufman, Carolina Mountain Life (One Shot Too Many)

Fun, fast-paced read with lots of local flavor. Although the mystery ... will keep you quickly turning pages, what's ultimately most satisfying is keeping company with the characters of Jemma and Tucker in this mountain adventure. —Elizabeth Langfahl, Our State Magazine (Perfect for Framing)

Gets off to a good start and maintains an exciting tension that manages to carry to the end.... A good part of Bishop's success is the set-up she's engineered. —Rob Neufeld, Asheville Citizen-Times (Appalachian Paradise)

Set against the beautiful backdrop of [mountains of] North Carolina, with engaging characters, red herrings at every turn, and a galvanizing story line, this is a must-have, must-read. Highly recommended. —Christy Tillery French, Midwest Book Reviews
